SMILES FROM THE MIXED COURT

BY J. L. BUTTS

It goes to show how unshakeable the constabulary habit may become. It also goes to show, according to Yang Ah-piau, that a mild indulgence of curiosity may erupt into consequences of considerable import.

Detective Foong Ding was paying an unofficial visit at the Chinese Post Office during the New Year holidays when he cast a purely unofficial glance out of one of the windows. His gaze rested, still unofficially, upon Yang, who appeared to be about to mount a bicycle at the curb. Detective Foong then observed that the bicycle was firmly chained to another similar machine. Whereupon his interest became actively official, and he went rapidly outside and instituted an inquiry. Yang, to all appearances, had despaired of detaching the bike and turned his attention to the most removable of its accessories, the bell, which he held in his hand. While the officer was questioning him Li Chang-yoen, pilot of the machine, came out of the Post Office, took in the situation and made a frantic grab for the chimer, at the same time throwing a disconcerting vocal obstruction athwart the explanation Yang was tendering the policeman.

Yang continued his explanation for the benefit of the Bench at the Mixed Court yesterday. He had been passing along the street and had brushed against the cycle. This was what had given rise to the detective's misconception that he was trying to remove the vehicle. He had no such intention, he assured the Court. As a matter of fact he was much too preoccupied to entertain any such thought. The preoccupation was due to his trying to remember the address of a friend who would lend him $1. The striking against the wheel, however, had disturbed his train of thought. Glancing at the obstruction he had noted the gleaming bell upon the handle bar. He reached out, more or less abstractedly, to jingle it. It fell off into his hand. Before he could readjust it the detective appeared.

The despatch with which the Court found Yang guilty may have been partly due to the fact that this worthy has had nine previous convictions for larceny at the hands of the same tribunal. Just what the penalty is to be this time will be announced next Wednesday, after the police have had more opportunity to go into his record.

DISREGARD DANGER SIGNAL

Trying to look like a plumber's assistant, Kiau Lai-pau was carrying four large lengths of water pipe across the Stone Bridge. The performance was so amateurish that the C.P.C. on duty at that point stopped and questioned the burdened one. Kau immediately dropped his pose and a couple of the pipes and confessed that the metal had been stolen from the Thibet Road works of the Gas Company. After which he began babbling incoherently about a "man with red eyes."

The C.P.C. warily got a grip of the other's collar, had the pipe loaded aboard a ricsha and proceeded to the station, where he recommended a padded cell for the captive.

Kau stuck to the tale of the person with the red optics when brought into Court yesterday. This flaming-eyed individual, he told the Magistrate, had wormed his way into the Gas Works two nights previous and had chucked the water pipe over the fence and into Soochow Creek. The next morning he had furnished the witness with a description of their location and had requested him to salvage them, sell them and keep the proceeds. Kau said he didn't know the real thief's name, but he was indubitably a "red-eyed" person and he was sure the police could locate him.

They postponed final action in the case one week to permit of investigations among the local Albino colony.

BOMB BURSTS IN POCKET OF RUSS REFUGEE; 1 DEAD, 2 HURT

BOY IS INJURED

Man Who Carried Explosive Blown To Pieces

One man was killed and two others, one a 12-year old boy, were seriously hurt when a bomb carried by the man who was killed accidentally exploded on board one of the fifteen portless ships filled with Russian refugees at Woosung, according to information received by THE CHINA PRESS last night.

The man killed is understood to have been carrying the bomb in his pocket on board the s.s. Yules, one of the fifteen ships denied permission to dock here and anchored off the Woosung breakwater, when he slipped and fell on the deck of the vessel. The bomb exploded, blowing the unidentified man to bits, and injured another man and a boy who were in the vicinity. The accident occured on December 31.

The man injured sustained only minor wounds and was cared for by doctors among the refugees. The boy, named Ardashess, son of one of the ship's officers, was also attended by one of the doctors aboard the ship for two days, after which he was brought to Shanghai and placed in the General Hospital.

After another delay Dr. H. Fresson was called and operated on the boy. A piece of the bomb is reported to have entered the boy's knee, necessitating an operation, and it was said last night that it might be necessary to amputate the leg to save his life.

Chinese authorities are reported to be making a thorough investigation into the circumstances surrounding the accident, being especially interested in why one of the refugees should have a bomb in his possession. Details are missing but it is thought that the bomb was a Mills bomb, such as is used in military maneuvers, and was being carried by the man without reason.

The refugees at Woosung are all either Russian officers and men and their families of the old regime or of the White Guard faction, driven out of Vladivostok by the Reds when the Japanese evacuated the city, and the bomb is thought to have been a part of the military stores they took with them when they sailed away from the Siberian capital.

No further action in the question of the refugees occured yesterday although several organisations, particularly interested in the 200 orphans, are reported as working out a scheme to take care of the orphans here until they are sent to Serbia.

Madame Grosse, wife of the Commissioner for Foreign Affairs, at 1 Whangpoo Road, is still receiving contributions for the orphans on the vessels, or those at Siccawei.

Chihli-Fengtien Reunion Rumors Again Reach Peking

Peking, Jan. 3.—Reports of negotiations between General Tsao Kun and General Chang Tso-lin with a view to a Chihli-Fengtien agreement continue to reach Peking.

It appears that General Pao Kwei-ching is acting as mediator and though progress is reported it is stated that General Chang's demand for the return of the arms and ammunition which General Wu Pei-fu captured in July and has since transferred to Loyang has so far formed an insuperable obstacle.

Ancient Babylonian Tablets Deciphered

PROFESSOR Edward Chiera, Assistant Professor of Arsyriology in the University of Pennsylvania, has completed deciphering of many Babylonian tablets, some of them dating from 2100 B. C. Most of the tablets are in the Sumerian language and were taken from the excavations of the Library of Nippur. The smaller tablets are Babylonian leases, with some geographical data. The larger tablets contain an account of the fall of man, in many ways paralleling the account in the Book of Genesis, especially of the banishment of Adam from Eden.

Exclusive Dispatch to THE CHINA PRESS

Dublin, Jan. 3.—The Freeman's Journal today published a cablegram from Archbishop Curley of Baltimore, Md., greatly deploring De Valera's "Campaign of riotous destruction," stating that America's sympathies were with the Irish Free State.

The death was announced today of Captain Lawrence P. O'Brien of Midhaven County. Captain O'Brien was an ardent supporter of the Fenian movement and on several occasions organised attempts to assist the Nationalist cause.

LIBERTY CLUB CASE UP IN U. S. COURT

Two Suits Brought Against Former Members Of Defunct Organisation

An action brought by the Russian Economic Society against the American Liberty club, now defunct, seeking to recover approximately Tls. 3,000 rental on clubrooms located at 1 Woosung road was taken under advisement yesterday by Judge C. S. Lobingier in the U. S. Court for China. At the same time another action was brought against the Liberty club by Messrs. Hall and Holtz to recover $2,908 which was the amount of furniture and crockery purchases made by Mr. Neville Craig, deceased U. S. Deputy Marshal, who was the organiser of the Liberty club which was formed primarily to meet the needs of ex-service men.

Several well-known Americans in Shanghai, among whom were Captain W. I. Eisler, Thomas Wright, of the Shipping Department of the American Consulate, Foster H. Kries, O. S. Steen of the Robert Dollar Company, H. B. Ollerdessen, T. R. Scanlon, H. S. Honigsberg, H. V. Bernard, Aaron Shainin and Joseph Keegan, all of whom were alleged members of the Liberty club testified yesterday morning.

The club was in existence, from February to April, 1921, during which time Mr. Craig is said to have paid the rental from his own pocket. The name was later changed to the American Athletic club. Captain Eisler, who was the first witness, said that he did not know whether he had been elected President or not, but was informed so by Mr. Craig upon his return from Hankow.

During the afternoon session Mr. Alexander Ialship, former president of the Russian Economic Society testified regarding the signing of the lease which called for a rental of Tls. 350 a month. Only two months of this rental had been paid, he stated. Mr. James R. Davies of Davies and Bryan, who appeared for the intervenors, Hall and Holtz, asked him if he had any objection to the removal of furniture purporting to belong to the club. Mr. Ialshin, at first demurred, then stated that the matter would have to be referred to the board of directors of the Russian Economic Society. Judge Lobingier suggested that if this removal could be effected he saw no reason why a portion of Hall and Holtz claim could not be satisfied.

Mr. C. Saveloff, former secretary of the Russian economic society also testified corroborating the evidence given by Mr. Ialshin.

Mr. F. J. Schuhl appeared for the Liberty Club, and Mr. Paul F. Faison of Williams, Faison and Franklin for the plaintiff.

Turkey Will Seek Separate Pacts

(Reuter's Service)

Constantinople, Jan. 2.—It is reported that Ismet Pasha has been instructed to insist at Lausanne on the integral maintenance of the Turkish National Pact and has been authorised to sign a separate peace with the Powers willing to subscribe to the terms of the Pact.

The National Assembly of Angora today at a six-hours' secret session animatedly discussed Hassan Bey's explanations of the negotiations at Lausanne. There was much criticism of the Allies who were accused of raising difficulties and delaying and jeopardising the settlement in spite of the goodwill, moderation and conciliatoriness of the Turks. The Assembly unanimously decided to uphold the National Pact.

Khilafat Ready To Help Turkey By Disobedience

(Reuter's Service)

Gaya, Jan. 2.—The Khilafat Conference at its concluding session today decided in the event of recurrence of war with Turkey immediately to launch a civil disobedience campaign, including propaganda in the police and the army, prevention of recruiting, refusal to subscribe to war loans, picketing of foreign cloth and liquor shops and prevention of the export of food grains.

The Conference also resolved to recruit a legion to serve under the Angora Government.

FRENCH TURN DOWN BONAR LAW'S PLAN; ENTENTE ENDANGERED

Paris Summarily Rejects British Reparation Scheme, Even As Basis For Discussion—Situation Called "Grave And Disturbing"

NEWSPAPERS TALK OF RUPTURE

British Premier Frankly Admits Possibility Of Disagreement—Poincare To Urge Acceptance Of His Proposals Today, And Counts On Belgian And Italian Support

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 3.—According to the Daily Mail the British delegates to the Paris Conference, who dined last night with M. Poincare, have learned that the French Government summarily rejects the British plan, which it is unable even to accept as a basis of discussion. The situation is grave and disturbing.

Paris, Jan. 3.—Deep disappointment is the note of French press comment on the British reparations plan.

The Matin quotes a high personage declaring that the plan would involve a revision of the Versailles Treaty. The paper refuses to believe that the "almost painful opposition" displayed yesterday in the British and French views will result in a rupture on all questions. It concludes by expressing confidence that, if an agreement is found to be impossible and France takes productive guarantees, Mr. Bonar Law will not adopt a hostile attitude.

The Echo de Paris says that M. Poincare will today insist on the French proposal being taken as the basis of discussion. If he does not get his way it is doubtful whether the Conference will survive, the paper declares.

Le Journal states that the clarity and moderation of M. Poincare's exposition favorably impressed the delegates, whom Mr. Bonar Law's plan bewildered. No French Parliament would approve the British scheme; indeed, no French Government could propose its approval.

The Petit Parisien, like Le Journal and all the other papers, is confident that Belgium and Italy will support France.

L'Homme Libre declares that the German proposals cannot be worse than the British and adds that Mr. Bonar Law's plan is such that a French personage expressed regret at the absence of Mr. Lloyd George but M. Poincare replied to him: "No, for Mr. Lloyd George would have tried to bring us here without telling us where we were going while Mr. Bonar Law had the courage frankly to submit a plan which completely misunderstands French opinion."

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Jan. 2.—In the course of a statement after the meeting of the Conference, Mr. Bonar Law declared that Britain needed reparations more than outsiders believed. He dwelt on the load of taxation which was unprecedented in any country and was curtailing the resources necessary for the development of industry and threatening to lead us into a worse position than our Allies, who were apparently financially weaker.

Mr. Law denied the assertion that Britain selfishly desired to restore German prosperity in order to secure a big customer. On the contrary, he continued, if the rest of the world were restored to normal conditions and an earthquake swallowed up Germany, we should gain because Germany was a greater competitor than customer.

The British Prime Minister proposed that the Committee of supervision in Berlin should include neutrals.

Mr. Law declared that, if Germany refused to take the preliminary steps to restore credit, we should be justified in taking measures to make them fulfil their obligations.

Referring to the British proposal Mr. Bonar Law pointed out that if we got every penny we hoped to get from Germany we should not receive from Germany and the Allies combined as much as we owed America but he expressed the opinion that it would be useless to approach the question from the point of view of needs but as a business proposition, realising that there was no chance of receiving a considerable sum until German credit had been restored.

In conclusion Mr. Bonar Law said that the British earnestly desired to act in accord with the Allies and he was convinced that the French Government had a like desire, but the danger lay in possible difference in the public opinion in the two countries which which might make an agreement between the Governments difficult and perhaps impossible.

M. Poincare took the opportunity at the first meeting of the Conference to reply to Herr Cuno's speech at the Hamburg Bourse on Dec. 31. He pointed out that the Covenant in the Treaty of Versailles already contained a formal undertaking of non-aggression which was binding

ADJOURN CASE OF MAN ARRESTED IN THE ASTOR HOUSE

Mixed Court Gives Remand To Settle U. S. Citizenship Claim

In order that the question of his nationality may be decided an adjournment was given yesterday by Assessor King and Magistrate Li in the case of Max Mandel, charged with being on the Astor House premises, supposedly for the purpose of committing a felony. The defendant was arrested January 1 on the complaint of Mr. T. C. White, in whose bathroom he was found. He claimed American citizenship and was taken before the American authorities, who, however, declined to give him recognition.

Yesterday at the Mixed Court Mandel stated that in his effects he has his American army discharge papers and the case was remanded one day to allow the consular officials to examine these.

Evidence of the arrest was given by Inspector Mackenzie, who stated that Mr. White had heard water running in his bathroom and on investigating had found the defendant partly undressed and had called for the manager of the hotel. Mandel said that he had not been feeling well, having had a couple of whiskeys, and wanted to take a cold bath. He went upstairs in the hotel but had no idea that he was getting into a private

Italian Cabinet Hits At Bureaucrats

Exclusive Dispatch to THE CHINA PRESS

London, Jan. 3.—A Times Dispatch from Rome states that the Italian government has decided to employ drastic measures against "bureaucratic" government. Resolutions were passed by the cabinet that under the new powers invested in it by parliament it has the right to dismiss without appeal any official, even those holding the highest offices in the government. Resolutions advocating rigid economy in governmental expenditures were also adopted.

These resolutions adopted by the Italian cabinet appear to be in line with the "Cromwellian Policy" outlined by Premier Mussolini in his ministerial statement. At that time he stated that the government "might live two days or two years" depending upon its efficiency. He eulogised the King's attitude during the "revolution" but stated that he could dispense with a parliamentary majority.

LOANS TO FARMERS

Exclusive Dispatch to THE CHINA PRESS

Washington, D. C. Jan. 3.—Commissioner Lobdell of the Farm Federal Labor Board announced that $230,000,000 was loaned to the farmers of the nation during 1922.

on France and would also apply to Germany as soon as she was admitted to the League of Nations.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 3.—It is pointed out that the British scheme is so arranged as to offer every inducement to Germany to redeem as soon as possible the 50,000,000,000 gold marks' worth of bonds, which sum might by early loans and discounting in the market be reduced to some 25,000,000,000 gold marks, and that the debt proposals would mean, roughly, a remission of two-thirds of the Allied debts to England.

The morning papers, with one prominent exception, comment approvingly on Mr. Bonar Law's scheme but the difficulty of harmonising the French and British plans is fully recognised, while all reports from Paris represent the French authorities as very disappointed at the British proposals, which are regarded as quite incompatible with the French views.

Paris, Jan. 3.—A semi-official French statement, roundly condemning the British scheme, particularly objects to the suggestion that France should abandon to Britain her gold deposit in London, amounting to over 1,000,000,000 francs, and likewise to the proposal to entrust the control of German finances to a council of representatives of the Allies, the United States and another neutral with the German Finance Minister presiding.

The statement, in conclusion, declares that the impression in political circles relative to the possibilities of an agreement is decidedly pessimistic.

French Program Lays Down Severe Terms For Germans

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, January 3.—An authoritative interpretation of the French program at the Conference declares that France will not agree to a reduction in her share of reparations unless the Allies agree to a different arrangement in relation to their claims on Germany.

With regard to inter-Allied debts France is unable to pay debt or interest until Germany has completed the restoration of the devastated regions.

The program insists on stabilisation of German currency, balancing of the Budget, cessation of discounting of Treasury bonds by the Reichsbank and enforcement of arrangements to prevent the flight of capital.

In the event of default the program contemplates as "pledges" the installation of an Inter-Allied commission at Essen to control coal and exploit forests and also on requisitions in the occupied territory of the Ruhr, including export duties, control of the issue of licenses, seizure of Customs receipts and coal taxes. The foregoing is estimated to yield 1,000,000,000 gold marks annually.

The "sanctions" comprise military occupation of Essen and Bochum and part of the Ruhr Basin, and the establishment of a Customs barrier on the east of the occupied territory without prejudice to postponement of the date of the final evacuation of the occupied territory.

British Would Give 4 Year Moratorium

(Reuter's Service)

London, Jan. 2.—The British plan for the settlement of reparations and inter-Allied debts comprises the granting to Germany of a moratorium for four years.

After the expiration of the four years Germany will pay 2,000,000,000 gold marks annually for four years, 2,500,000,000 gold marks annually for two years and after that 3,500,000,000, or such smaller sum, not less than 2,500,000,000, as may be fixed by an impartial tribunal.

The German obligations will take the form of 5 percent bonds, redeemable at call on easy terms at the outset and rising to par at the end of 32 years.

BONDS IN TWO SERIES

The bonds will be divided into two series of Gold Marks 50,000,000,000 and Gold Marks 17,310,000,000 respectively.

The plan does not provide a sinking-fund but permits of redemption on such liberal terms that the saving of the annual interest on bonds redeemed should be sufficient cover for the interest on sinking-fund on German loans raised in the market for redemption purposes.

The deliveries of coke to France and coal to Italy, and possibly the deliveries of dye stuffs will be continued on a reduced scale during the initial period.

The foregoing depends on German undertaking to stabilise the mark, to restore the Budget equilibrium, and also to accept such financial supervision as the Allies may deem necessary.

IN CASE OF DEFAULT

Germany must also agree in the event of default to measures which the Allies may unanimously deem necessary, including forcible seizure of revenues and military occupation of further German territory.

If the supervising authority unanimously decides that payments can be made before the expiration of the four years, the annuities may be ante-dated, not exceeding two years, without increasing the total liabilities.

With regard to inter-Allied debts the plan proposes, provided all proposals for taking pledges and also the application of other sanctions are abandoned:

Firstly, that the gold held in Britain as security for inter-Allied debts shall be applied to reduction of the debts;

Secondly, that the first series bonds received by France in respect of the Belgian war-debt and Gold Mks. 1,500,000,000 of the first series bonds received by Italy shall be transferred to Britain, and

Thirdly, that the balance of European war-debts shall be written off and all counterclaims abandoned, conditionally on the debtors transferring their interest in the second series bonds to a pool for distribution to those Powers which are indebted to the United States in proportion to their respective American debts.

Changli Schools Making Progress

(China Press Service)

Changlihsien, Chihli, Dec. 29.—The Changli Agricultural School, under the direction of Mr. C. F. Chou, is showing encouraging progress. The class of 20 boys, all of third and fourth Middle School grade, are most enthusiastic in their work, have a class song and yell, and are doing their own janitor work. These boys come from the Chihli and Shantung famine regions, and other places which can recommend suitable candidates.

Director Chou, a graduate of Illinois State University School of Agriculture, is paying special attention to horticulture, as Changli is well known throughout North China for its native fruit. Last Spring a nearby farmer was encouraged to try the effects of spraying on his grape vines, with the result that the vines which last year yielded him $25 worth of grapes, this year produced over $100 worth. Many fruit growers who observed this experiment are now asking for information and assistance in protesting their crops next year.

The Changli Middle School, of which the Agricultural School is a department, is crowded to capacity with over 200 boys. This school has made remarkable progress the past few years under the able leadership of Principal Howe Te An. New dormitories and other facilities must be provided for next Fall. The most hopeful sign in China today is the insatiate thirst of Chinese youth for education, and the willingness of parents to sacrifice for this end.

Misses Last Boat, Is Robbed Of Ring; Tries To Drown Self

Found weeping on the Nanking Road jetty and preparing to leap into the Whangpoo, a young Chinese woman gave her reasons for wishing to commit suicide to the constable who took her in charge Tuesday night.

Her husband was in Hankow, the woman said, and she had been living with an aunt in Pootung. Tuesday afternoon she came to Shanghai to deliver some articles to a friend. Going back to the jetty in the evening she found that she had missed the last launch. While she was wondering what to do three loafers accosted her and one of them took away part of her clothes and her ring.

New Crime Wave Sweeps Across U. S.

(China Press Service)

Exclusive Dispatch

New York, Dec. 31.—There has been a noticeable renewal of the crime wave sweeping over the United States during the holidays. Yesterday afternoon an automobile containing three occupants drew up at the curb in front of a fashionable jewelers on upper Broadway. Two of the men left the car and sauntered leisurely into the store while the third man remained at the steering wheel and kept the engine going.

After gazing for a few moments at the window display they entered the jewelry store, and while one man held up the proprietor and the several purchasers who happened to be witnin, his confederate smashed the show cases with his revolver butt, gathered up all the jewels in sight valued at $10,000 and escaped on the motor car with his companion, which sped away at high speed.

A more daring jewelry robbery occurred yesterday in Minneapolis, Minn., when a band of robbers mingled with the holiday crowds in the most crowded section of the city, raided two jewelry stores in broad daylight and escaped with money and jewels totalling $25,000.

HANNIGS CITES FACTS TO PROVE HE'S AMERICAN

Was Decorated Eight Times For Military Service

Mr. R. S. Haskell, attorney for Mr. Charles Hannigs, well known Shanghai and Tientsin hotel man, has written to Washington requesting a full explanation of the facts concerning Mr. Hannigs American citizenship and giving the State Department a resume of Mr. Hannigs citizenship status, according to information received last night. Mr. Haskell's action followed swiftly on the heels of the announcement in Tientsin that United States Consul-General Stuart Fuller had written Mr. Hannigs declaring that he would no longer be recognised as an American citizen.

In the letter Consul-General Fuller explained that Mr. Hannigs had not given sufficient proof that his father was properly naturalised and that as a consequence he would no longer be recognised as an American.

Mr. Haskell, in his letter to the State Department at Washington, explained that Mr. Hannigs had been born in Stockholm, Sweden, but that he had been an American to all extents and purposes, and actually, for almost fifty years.

IN ARMY AND NAVY

In addition to having long been a resident of the United States Mr. Hannigs, Mr. Haskell says, served twenty years in the service of the United States government, six years in the American navy, five years in the Army and red cross, about ten years in civil service. He has been wounded five times in army and navy service and is the possessor of six campaign badges and two special decorations from the United States Government, the latest being the campaign medal for service in France and in Siberia in the recent war.

Mr. Hannigs went into the American Navy when he was twenty years of age, in 1893, serving at first on the gunboat Matchias which was on the China station in the period of the Chinese-Japanese war. He later was transferred to the cruiser San Francisco and later served on the old New York, aboard which he saw service in Cuba in the Spanish American war in which he was wounded.

JOINS ARMY

After leaving the Navy in November 1898 he enlisted in the American Army in the following year and after a stay in St. Louis he went to the Philippines as a private in the 12th U. S. Infantry. He was twice wounded in the Filipino insurrection and later was transferred to the 9th Infantry.

He served with the 9th Infantry in China through the Boxer uprising in which he again was wounded and following this warfare he fought through the historic Samar campaign in the Philippines. In 1902 Mr. Hannigs was discharged from the Third Reserve hospital incapitated for further service due to wounds received in action.

Following this period Mr. Hannigs was in American civil service in the Philippines, notably as assistant superintendent of the Iwahig penal colony.

"Why such action has been taken is a mystery to me," Mr. Hannigs said last night. "I have been an American for fifty years—I've never pretended to be anything else. All my interests are American. I've served in the army and the navy—and there was no question then whether or not I was an American. This is merely another in a series of incidents that have happened in which I have gotten the worst of it. I am sure, however, that the question will be cleared up to the satisfaction of all concerned."

Cotton Traders In U. S. Are Expecting Higher Prices

(Reuter's Service)

New York, Dec. 8.—There appears to be a tendency towards the close of the present week to resume talk of higher prices with a possibility of new highs before the year ends. At all events, a number of the old bulls who were prominently identified with the advance to above the 25-cent level, and then sold out, have replaced their lines and are giving notable support to the market. This has caused a sharp upturn in the last two days, attended by a decided turn for the better in news from all quarters. Spot advices have improved from Texas and other sections, and mills are said to be buying again not only of futures but of spots. Naturally, with so important an element arrayed once more on the bull side, they would be interested in prominently displaying all the favorable news items they could produce from any part of this country or abroad, just as Liverpool is said to emphasise gloomy Manchester news whenever the market here gets uncomfortably strong.

But underneath all there seems to be a good basis for bullish talk. For instance, one of the leading cotton men here points out that whereas the supply of American cotton that can be counted on for the current season is altogether inadequate to support a rate of consumption anything like that of last year, there has thus far been no evidence whatever of a lessening of the demand from last year's volume.

FOUR MILLION BALES

He finds that the entire quantity of cotton to come from the interior of the South for the balance of the season will be no much, if at all, in excess of 4 million bales, which in view of the heavy spinners takings and the large exports thus far he believes to be significant. A new Orleans house, estimating spinners' takings for the balance of the season as equal to those of last year, emphasises the strength of the statistical situation by figuring a probable carryover July 31 next of only 1,320,000 bales, against 2,989,999 a year ago. The Merchants National Bank of Boston goes even further and estimates a carry-over at the end of the current cotton season of only about 600,000 bales, compared with 6,500,000 two years ago, and argues that "such a carry-over equalling less than a single month's consumption and exports would not be enough to carry the mills to September or October when the new crop would be available."

It must be remembered however, that long before this, sentiment will have been influenced by the new crop prospects, and while no bales will be added to the present supply by any favorable new crop outlook, such would undoubtedly influence speculative sentiment and encourage mills to hold off as long as possible at the end of the season.

LABOR SHORTAGE

It begins to look now as if recent rumors about negroes leaving the Southern farms for other employment had a good deal of foundation for reports state that Georgia has lost so many workers in this way that officials are becoming alarmed and have forbidden agents to offer any inducements whatever, calculated to make farm labor dissatisfied. This with the probable shortage of chemicals with which to wage war against boll weevil, of course presents the most dismal side of the crop outlook.

Undoubtedly the South will make every effort to plant a big acreage next spring, and take a chance on the weevil and the weather. If there should be a good winter and favorable spring weather, the weevil menace would doubtless be considerably reduced, and the outlook for a good crop would depend to a great extent on the weather during the season, which is just as likely to be good as it is to be unfavorable. Regarding the position of mills, it is understood that while Southern mills are fairly well supplied with raw cotton, those in New England have very little on hand and are constantly in the market for spot cotton.

Some believe they may come into the market in a more substantial manner after the holidays, as they seem to be well supplied with orders for goods. One local cotton man said his advices indicated, that both the mills and New England merchants seem to anticipate much higher prices after January 1, and some are quite freely predicting 30 cents. We were told by a spot cotton merchant that in his opinion Lancashire might easily become frightened over the outlook for supplies and come into the market as a heavy buyer after the turn of the year.

A Savannah trade paper scouts the idea that Europe is too poor to buy cotton and cotton goods and declares that the greater the poverty and distress of the people, the greater is the need for work, and the more urgent the demand for raw materials for the factories.

'China's Woes Due To My Unworthiness,' Says President Li

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Jan. 2.—President Li Yuan-hung yesterday issued a lengthy circular telegram to all provinces in which, after giving prominence to domestic troubles and foreign evils during the eleven years since the establishment of the Republic, he says:

"The abolition of the Tuchunate and the curtailment of soldiery were the conditions on which I consented to return to the presidency. Though I have already obtained the approval of the Tuchuns of all the provinces, and in spite of the fact that six months have passed since I assumed my present office, no satisfactory results have yet been effected, and this is practically due to my unworthiness.

"It is, however, no exaggeration to say that if the projected abolition of the Tuchunate and the curtailment of soldiery are not put in force, the last days of the nation will come sooner or later."

CANTON REFUSES OWN BANKNOTES AS TAX PAYMENTS

People No Longer Support Provincial Bank Of Kwangtung

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Canton, Dec. 27.—The finances of Kwangtung are now in a very bad plight owing to over-issue of notes of the Provincial Bank of Kwangtung. The value of the notes having gone below 30 per-cent, the Government was recently compelled itself to decline to receive paper money for the payment of taxes. The Government has arranged the ratio of specie and paper as legal tender and the addition of surtax in such a way that payment is practically all in specie.

The refusal of the Government to accept its own depreciating notes has made it impossible for the people further to support the Provincial Bank. More than $27,000,000 worth of paper money has been issued up to date, according to a report of the citizens' committee which is auditing the accounts of the Provincial Bank of Kwangtung.

General Li Hou-chi, ex-Tuchun of Fukien, is still a political refugee in Swatow. He is in frequent communication with officials in Canton.

The Educational Commission of Kwangtung is considering a plan for amalgamating the Government law, agricultural, and normal schools into a provincial university, making the existing institutions departments.

In spite of local disturbances everywhere, the good roads movement in Kwangtung is progressing rapidly. Local residents are not waiting for the Public Highway Commission's decisions before proceeding with the work. While the provincial authorities are unable to raise sufficient funds to launch the province-wide project immediately, local organisations are working on their various sections which will be connected later.

U. S. Newspapers Optimistic For '23

Exclusive Dispatch to THE CHINA PRESS

New York, Jan. 1.—Most of the principal newspapers this morning contain optimistic editorial articles on business and political prospects for the new year and agree with a review, published by Mr. Hoover, the Secretary of Commerce, in which he declares that business in America is overcoming adverse political and social conditions and Britain and other European nations are making steady progress in production and in diminishing unemployment.

The New York Times sees one of the promising signs of world reconstruction in "the extraordinary change of sentiment which has come over the Government and the Senate."

General Threatens To Seize Salt Tax Receipts At Ichang

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Ichang, Dec. 26.—General Yang Sen, formerly commander of the Szechuen Second Army is still in Ichang. About a fortnight ago he issued a proclamation that he intended to levy an extra tax of $1.50 on each bag of Szechuen salt that was landed here. The merchants immediately protested and appealed to the Salt Administration, which encouraged them to resist such an illegal tax, and representations were made to the proper quarter.

Now General Yang has gone further and has declared that if he is not paid this tax, he will confiscate by seizure the salt that comes here, and he has already held up some of the junks in an attempt to get them to pay. Of course, this money is supposed to be for the support of his second Szechuen army, but it is difficult to understand why a defeated Szechuen general should be allowed to come into this province and make attempts to raise money.

But it is clear, however, that he is well supported, and General Wu Pei-fu has told the merchants in answer to a protest sent him that he does not wish to interfere, and that they should make their own terms.

Virginia Lumsdaine Was Little Miss '23

It was ascertained yesterday that the little miss who made such a big hit as "Miss 1923" at the New Year's eve party at the Astor House was little Virginia Lumsdaine, three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. V. H. Lumsdaine, 72 Szechuen Road. Mr. Lumsdaine is Shanghai manager for Connell Bros. and Company.

As "Miss 1923" little Virginia, gowned as a fairy, with butterfly wings and carrying a wand, stepped out of the big clock that Manager Moore had installed on the orchestra platform in the grill room. With all the lights turned off as midnight approached all eyes were on the big clock, which was illuminated by a spotlight. And promptly with the birth of the new year the clock opened and "Miss 1923" stepped out to greet the guests.

It was a very effective setting and Mr. Moore was deluged with congratulations, along with queries as to the identity of the wee actress who carried off her part so well.

"An' I didn't cry only the littlest tiny bit," boasted Virginia.

Taumon, Texas., Jan. 2.—Mrs. Hilm Knox was arrested here today and charged with the murder of her husband on November 26. Mr. Knox who was a millionaire lumberman, was found dead at his home at Hemphill, Texas, with a bullet wound in his head. Partial evidence showed that Mr. Knox had committed suicide, but the motive was lacking, since he enjoyed perfect health, and had recently completed a large successful business merger netting him a handsome profit. Additional clues were recently discovered which pointed to Mrs. Knox, culminating in her arrest.

PENN STATE BEATEN BY WEST TEAM

Southern California Winners Annual Game At Pasadena

SCORE IS 14-3

Trojans Easy Victors In Tournament Of Roses Battle

China Press Special

Pasadena, Jan. 2.—The University of Southern California eleven finished the season in a blaze of glory here yesterday when the Trojans defeated Penn State by a score of 14-3 in the annual battle between the East and the West.

The Los Angeles team bested the Easterners in every department of football and the victory, in one of the most spectacular of the Tournament of Roses games in years, was well earned. A record crowd saw the battle.

Bezdeck's Penn Staters started with a rush but U.S.C. held when the Easterners had the ball on the 28 yard line. Here Penn State made the only three points credited to the Eastern team, a drop kick sailing directly between the goal posts.

Then the Trojans started and there was little question that the Western eleven was entitled to the honors of the day. Forward passes and trick plays brought about the two touchdowns, both of which were followed by points.

This is the first year that the University of Southern California represented the West Coast in the annual New Year's game. Andy Smith's wonder team from the University of California declined the invitation of the Pasadena Committee in charge of the Tournament of Roses and a wire vote of the Pacific Coast Conference resulted in the selection of Elmer Henderson's team.

The Southern California eleven has lost but two games in three years, the University of California winning both battles.

FOOTBALL TITLE WILL BE DECIDED NEXT SATURDAY

BY CHARLES E. BRICKLEY

Former Harvard All American Star and Most Famous Football Player of the Last Decade.

The selection of Buell of Harvard for quarterback on my first "all-eastern" team may cause some comment, but possibly I have a different idea of just what a quarterback is on a team for than the average writer. In my opinion, the most important work that a quarterback does is to select the proper plays and run his offense correctly. Buell does this better than any quarterback I have seen for years. Other quarterbacks may be more flashy and better running with the ball, etc., but Buell uses his brains more than any quarterback in the game today, in my opinion.

KAW AND OWEN

Of the other backs, I don't see how either Owen and Kaw could be kept off any eastern all-star selection. Both of these men can kick, run, pass, are great defensive players and great against forward passes, Kaw being in this respect the best man I saw in action all year. Jordan was a great line plunger, and teamed up with Kaw and Owen, would be even better.

Parr of the Navy and Gray of Princeton were practically perfect as ends in every department of end play, while the same may be said of Treat of Princeton, and Julian of Brown.

Treat, playing his first big games, was wonderful. Schwab of Lafayette and Breidster of Army, both veterans, were the best of the guards, while Garbisch of the Army, in addition to being a wonderful pivot man, was a fine place-kicker, as well. This first team, man for man, in my opinion, could not be improved much by making any changes.

SECOND, THIRD TEAMS

There is really not much to choose between the second and third teams, and in fact, practically any of these players could fit on the first team if necessary.

Mulligan, the big Army tackle, was one of the very best in the game, and as captain next year should be even more valuable to the West Pointers. Pfann of Cornell played remarkable football all season, especially against Pennsylvania. Hanson, his teammate at tackle, was spectacular at times, and very sure at place kicks all season. Wood of the Army, a fine line plunger, was the best punter in the East. Brunner of Lafayette was one of the best broken field runners I saw all year.

'O'Hearne of Yale, whom I placed on the third team, had a hard luck season. I personally believe that he is one of the greatest backs in the country.

Croup.

Every young child is susceptible to croup. Don't wait until this dreadful disease attacks your little one before you prepare for it. It comes in the night when chemists' shops are usually closed, and this alone should be a warning. Get and keep Chamberlain's Cough Remedy at hand. It never fails, acts quickly and is absolutely harmless.

Second Fight In As Many Nights Victory For Pancho

China Press Special

Philadelphia, Jan. 2.—There is no stopping Pancho Villa, the Filipino flyweight who annexed the American title by defeating Johnny Buff three months ago.

On New Year's Eve he gave Terry Martin a trouncing at Madison Square Garden. Twenty-four hours later he made a punching bag of Battling Murray at Philadelphia, winning easily in eight rounds.

Fighting two good men—and Martin is a real contender for honors in the bantam division—in two nights, caught on with the New York sport writers and Villa is lauded to the skies in this morning's papers.

Villa announced today that he is willing to take on anyone at any time and is willing to fight three times a week, if he has sufficient opponents.

Frank Churchill, his manager who came to the United States with him from Manila, issued a statement at Philadelphia after Murray had been given a drubbing.

Churchill said: "Villa has won the title and he is one champion who is willing to defend it against all comers. He fought to get it and is willing to fight to hold it."

This correspondent relates that in the Moselle Department, the iron and steel manufacturers feel that the worst is over and that before long many more furnaces may be going. He discussed with a prominent industrialist the question of pig-iron being exchanged on a private commercial basis with Germany, and learned that while it is true that negotiations toward this object are under way, they are "not likely to reach a conclusion soon." The Lorrainers would like such an exchange "for part of their output," says this informant, but not for so great a tonnage as was exported to Germany before the territory became French again. The French have great hopes in connection with their mechanical engineering industries, and wish to protect them, according to the writer, who says further:

"A tremendous business, even for these times, is being done by the textile interests of the Colmar and Mulhouse neighborhoods. In the past, and even now to some extent, the buyers have been Germans. These do not seem to mind what price they pay, and so much has been exported to Germany lately that people are asking what the Germans can be doing with it.

"The mechanical industries of both the upper and the lower Rhine departments have regained their former activity in a fair measure, and the potash mines are carrying no stocks. With their condition an unfavorable comparison is afforded by the tanning and foodstuff interests of Strasbourg, as also by the salt-mining interests."

The great problem before Alsace-Lorraine appears to be whether she can divert all her exports into new channels, and though general conditions are better there than elsewhere in France, "several important industries are all but stagnant." More outlets must be found, because France, though gaining as a nation from the addition of this rich territory, "will never be able to absorb a large portion of its surplus output."

Dr. Steinmez, by the way, is a candidate for the office of State Engineer on the Socialist ticket.

Lady Rhondda On Americans

London.—At last a Briton of ...ote has returned from the United ...States without a word of criticism ...or the statement that America is ...shrinking because it does not, ...forthwith, wipe out the allied ...debts, writes Even Griffiths, Lon...don correspondent of the Kansas ...City Star.

And this person, who really ...seems to have found some good ...things in America, is a woman. ...Furthermore, she is, perhaps, the ...most important business woman ...in the British empire. That she ...is the daughter of a viscount and ...a great social figure and that she ...is the woman who will be the first ...to sit in the British house of lords ...adds further interest.

This extraordinary English woman is Lady Rhondda, daughter of the world famous coal master who amassed a fortune though he started humbly, and who saved his countrymen from being starved by German U-boats during the war through his superb work as food controller.

"Women in America," said Lady Rhondda, a few days after her return, "have far better opportunities, not only in the professions but in almost every phase of life, than they have in England. They are keener, too, and the reason they are keener is that their opportunities encourage them. Keenness in America may bring rewards for women which elsewhere are denied.

"Only in one way do I find that women are discriminated against in the United States. They do not get there real equality with men in money earning capacity. That is an injustice. They are paid less than men for the same work. I find no hesitation among American employers about giving women really responsible positions. There is not, in the United States, the distrust of women employes which there seems to be in England.

"American women gain greatly through the fact that life in the United States is comparatively unhampered by tradition. What grandmother found fitting in the environment of her passed day and generation is not, in America, regarded as an unalterable guide for that which is allowable for the woman of the present day. This means much for women's real development. Even the matter of wages is more nearly equalized in the United States than it is in England. Not even in America is this situation what it should be, but it is better there than here in England.

Lady Rhondda was a little surprised to find in the United States, where suffrage is so much more complete a matter than it is in England, so few women candidates for office.

"I found American women who were quite familiar with the British political situation," she said, "although, I must confess, I should find it hard to discover English women who are equally familiar with America's. This general political intelligence is sure to give America a great international advantage, for it will mean intelligent general opinion with regard to United States relationships to world affairs.

"The Americans are really more world-minded than the English. Their habit of European travel and the able foreign correspondence in some of their newspapers helps to forward this. If we, of England, would go as numerously to America as Americans come here we should gain by it.

"Travel, to Americans, is one of the demands of even mild prosperity. In Europe only the rich travel. In America all but the poor are travelers and the result is shown in a certain breadth of general intelligence which it would be hard to find elsewhere."

BUCCANEERS NOW PIRATE LIQUOR ON HIGH SEAS

Modern Captain Kidds Prefer Booze To Pieces Of Eight

Exclusive Dispatch to THE CHINA PRESS

New York, Dec. 31.—Recent reports from the Bahamas and West Indies indicate that the shades of Captain Kidd and other bold buccaneers have evidently returned to life and are practising a twentieth century variation of robbery on the high seas. Instead of stripping Spanish Galleons of doubloons and beautiful maidens as in days yore, they now remove precious cargoes of sparkling burgundy and Champagne, which are declared to be frequently worth more than specie treasure.

Bahama pilots are said to be in league with the pirates who, masquerading in the uniforms of United States revenue officers have boarded vessels, stating that they are within the three mile limit of the United States and have accordingly seized their entire liquor cargo as being contraband under the recent prohibition ruling.

The most flagrant case was when a vessel cleared from Nassau for St. Pierre Miquelon, the French possession, and was stopped by a small vessel flying the U.S. Customs flag and 10,500 cases of brandies liqueurs and Champagnes were removed from the vessel's hold to that of the alleged coast guard cutter. As soon as the cargo was safely stowed aboard, the cutter lowered its flag and steered seaward.

Hawaiian Music

With the closing of the Bandman Comedy season in Shanghai we are pleased to announce that we do not by any means see the last of the Bandman enterprises this season, for they are to be followed shortly by a novel musical attraction in the form of Kaai's Royal Hawaiian Troubadours." This combination consists of 12 Hawaiian Artistes direct from Honolulu and they will open a short season at the Victoria Theater on Saturday January 13. Mr. Ernest Kaai, after recently completing a very successful tour in India under Bandman's Eastern Circuit Ltd., signed a contract with this concern for a world tour with an entirely new all Hawiian Company. He returned to Honolulu from India in September last and sailed again for the Orient a few days ago and it is this attraction that Shanghai will have the pleasure of witnessing in a few days.

The entertainment consists of a combination of Hawaiian music, songs, melody and dances and the easiest description of this novel attraction is to say that by visiting the Victoria Theater during this Company's season one would be enjoying a 'Night in Honolulu' with all its melody and mirth.

Coming Wines

Post-war vintages, with certain exceptions, leave much to be desired, and the right selection of promising young wines exacts a palate trained to detect great qualities in a crude article as yet undrinkable, writes Horace Annesley Vachill in The London Daily Mail.

I have before me an interesting account (by Mr. F. C. Lloyd) of the sale of the Beaune Hospice burgundies in 1921. The sale takes place annually in the fine 15th-century hall and the card of admission costs 5 francs. The big buyers from London, Paris and Brussels attend and the wines (absolutely pure) are tasted from the cask.

Each potential buyer brings with him a little silver cup. What is looked for is finesse, color, body and elegance.

Four hundred and fifty litres of, let us say, the Guigone de Salis may fetch about six thousand francs. Guigone de Salis was the wife of the great chancellor, Nicholas Rollin, who was buried in the chapel of the Hospital. The wines are as new as the great casks that hold them.

Only experts can detect their potential value. The amateur who wishes to stock a modest cellar will be well advised to buy his "coming" wines in bottle from some reputable wine merchant.

At the present moment the 1915 burgundies are maturing well, but most of them will improve with more age. The 1919 wines are distinctly good. Some of the 1920 burgundies suffered from the storms. The 1921 vintage (not yet bottled) may prove superb.

Barring last year's vintage we have had no really remarkable clarets since 1911, and not many of these are left: 1916 may be commended. There are some good wines of 1914. The finer growths of 1918 must be selected with discrimination.

Would that I could afford to buy a pipe of 1920 port and have it bottled forthwith, but should I live to drink it?

Champagne—1911 is the wine of the moment: 1914 and 1917 are coming on.

Hocks and Moselles—1921 is the best vintage in fifty years. The best hocks are long-lived. There is very little old hock for sale in Germany. Famous wines out of private cellars dribble now and again into the market.

Apart from the trade, only the privileged few can lay down wine in bulk. Under postwar conditions (and prices) such a "lock-up" of capital is a hazardous speculation.

Nevertheless, it is foolish to jump to the other extreme and buy a dozen of wine when it happens to be wanted. Good red wine cannot be treated so churlishly. It must rest tranquilly for many weeks after the shortest railway journey.

All men of moderate incomes should lay down a few dozens of clarets and burgundies which will improve rapidly with keeping. Wines at 48s. a dozen today will be worth double the money seven years hence.

Blood Poisoning

Yet Another Grand Recovery

Our Portrait is of Mr. WILLIAM HARBORNE, of 6, Railway Road, Perry Bar, Birmingham, England, who writes:

"About two years ago I met with rather a bad accident. My arm was cut severely, and I had to have it stitched at the hospital. This caused me six weeks' absence from work, and after resuming my duties for one week I broke out all over my body with huge Boils. Again I went to the Hospital, and was treated for Blood Poisoning; this happened on three successive occasions until I began to think I should never be cured. Then I gave Clarke's Blood Mixture a trial, and the first bottle or two seemed to be driving out the poison, so I persevered, and after taking ten bottles I was cured. It is now over twelve months since I left off taking your Clarke's Blood Mixture, and I have seen no signs of any further blood disorder."

Just Books

By A Roving Critic

Now this reason and now that, now good and now bad, have kept me from writing about various books I have read this summer until I find a row of them before me with only a valedictory paper in which to notice them, though more than one deserves more space than it is possible to give. Here, for instance, is Marguerite Wilkinson's naive, pleasant chronicle, "The Dingbat of Arcady" (Macmillan), of the adventures which she and her husband have taken "on sing ing rivers and blue bays" since the year in which she was thirty and discovered the sun and wind. Whether in a leaky rowboat or in a cranky motor, whether in Oregon or rural New York or in the southwestern counties of England, these travelers were jolly; and the book of their travels is fresh and sweet. And here is Stephen Graham's "Tramping With a Poet in the Rockies" (Appleton), in which one of the best-intentioned of Britons tells how he explored the West with Vachel Lindsay. I suspect that neither the mountains nor the poet of Mr. Graham's version is very accurately rendered, but it has variety and spirit and good humor and not too much mystical doctrine, and it has as well thirty-eight beguiling emblems by Vernon Hill. And here, very conspicuously, is Harry Kemp's very new "Tramping on Life" (Boni and Liveright), which was once announced as a novel to be called "John Gregory," after the name the protagonist bears, but which can never have been intended to be anything less than the "autobiographical narrative" which the subtitle admits it is. Though some of the names of persons and places are moderately disguised, the record is very candid: a record of an Ohio childhood, a fling at sea and various excursions on the smoky trail, a wild, free period of study at the University of Kansas, an eager curiosity about love culminating in a lyric episode of which other aspects are presented in "The Brass Check"; and a passionate immersion in poetry, with "Leaves of Grass" for a bible and Shelley for a pillar of fire and Keats for diurnal manna, ending only with the end of this book and the appearance of Harry Kemp's first published volume. I read "Tramping on Life" with the mounting pleasure with which I read Brand Whitlock's "Forty Years of It" and Hamlin Garland's "Son of the Middle Border." Without being greatly touched by the poetry or specially convinced by the philosophy in the story, I was arrested and detained by the sense of vividness of life which it communicates. It is one of the richest of tramp books; it is a solid document on the rebellions and dissents of a generation.

To characterise Heywood Broun's "Pieces of Hate" (Doran) I quote a sentence from his essay on George Jean Nathan: "A man may remain pretty much to himself as long as he chooses to keep his touch light and avoid research." These two things Mr. Broun does in a manner which I find always entertaining no matter how much I may disagree with him as regards particular verdicts. He is himself on every occasion, with an instinct for being cool when he is most personal which proves that he takes his ground without self-consciousness or effort. He has a large gusto for books, for sport, for intelligence, for fun, for human decency, without hard creeds about any of them. He has the courage of his gusto and knows how to write in the easy tone of speech—sometimes rather profoundly, often rather trivially, more often very acutely, and never uninterestingly. I wish the hero of "One Man in His Time" (Doubleday, Page), by Ellen Glasgow, could have had a little more of this instinct for the personal. Instead, he helps to prove that it is difficult for even so intelligent a novelist as Miss Glasgow to make drama out of the career of a politician whose largest passion seems to be that of sticking to the middle of the road, too friendly neither to right nor to left, neither to old nor to new. The course of politics, like the course of life in general, is indeed a compromise; but time effects the compromise, not the actors, who themselves when they are most important are almost sure to be so devoted to one idea or one program that they expect the earth to falter and the heavens to fall if one item of their aspiration goes amiss. Yet if Gideon Vetch, governor of Virginia, does not convince me, the more conservative Virginians of the story do. The melodrama of the plot hurts a charming piece of local color which contains many significant comments upon the mood and temper of the times.

Of the treatises I have read no one has more impressed me by the method of its erudition than "A Short History of Christian Theophagy" (Open Court), by Preserved Smith. Mr. Smith belongs with those rare scholars who carry masses of minute learning lightly and inform them with ideas. If primitive worshippers, he sees, eat their gods, in the form of sacred animals, to absorb some of their strength into themselves, so, symbolically, do Christians when at the communion table they eat what is called the body and drink what is called the blood of the Savior. The symbol is now so remote from the primitive custom and conception out of which it grew that the orthodox not only deny the connection but are outraged by hearing of it; to the historian, however, the connection is clear enough. Without distortion or nagging or exultation Mr. Smith follows the trail of such god-eating in Christian history, venturing into a thousand strange corners and throwing light wherever he goes. William T. Hornaday, in "The Minds and Manners of Wild Animals" (Scribner), has a knowledge of his theme comparable to Mr. Smith's, but he cannot be content to keep within the evidence. Is it because he is writing a popular book that he falls into a popular lingo, talking about the "morals" of his beasts and crediting them with human and near-human motives and intellectual processes about which men simply cannot know anything until the beasts learn to talk? Possibly, yet I wish Mr. Hornaday had not done it. His records of personal observation are so absorbing in themselves that they deserve to stand alone, without the conjectures and anthropomorphic parallels over which any critical reader is bound to stumble. Havelock Ellis's "Little Essays of Love and Virtue" (Doran) I could hardly call a treatise were it not for the unity which is imparted to these papers by the long, steady, central view which the author takes of human affairs. Here the profoundest student of sex among the English-speaking peoples, and one of the greatest of British scholars, gives himself to informal discussion of certain sexual problems now current: The Meaning of Purity, The Objects of Marriage, The Love-Rights of Women, The Play-Function of Sex, and so on. As always with Mr. Ellis, he knows the taboos which hedge the whole subject about among Anglo-Saxons, and yet he walks no less firmly than quietly, conscious of the enormous background which his historical and psychological studies furnish him and able to bring his great knowledge to bear upon the most temporary controversy. As always with him, too, his style is suave, full, ripe, at times tending to softness and even to rhapsody. Not one of his more momentous books, "Little Essays" is stimulating and valuable.

When I first emerged from a reading of "Gallantry" (McBride) in the new version which, by deft and subtle changes, brings it into the bright middle ground between Poictesme and Lichfield in the charmed circle of James Branch Cabell's imagined universe, I said I thought this the most fascinating of all his books; and I still think so, though I remember the larger "Jurgen" and the racier "Rivet in Grandfather's Neck" and the more even "Domnei" and the more revealing "Cream of the Jest;" but I realise that the special prosperity which the new book has with me comes from the facts that Mr. Cabell's "gallantry" interests me rather more than his "chivalry" and that he seems to me, as I have hinted elsewhere, by giving freer rein to the Marlowe than to the Congreve in him to have done Congreve and himself a little less than justice. He is by temper so intimately at home in the world of the second Hanoverian George—that region of peruke and furbelow, of minuet and rapier, of cosmetic and gesture, of decorum and artifice—that he finds it easier to make a reader feel at home there than to make him feel at home in the more remote Poictesme. The ten stories of "Gallantry" are only the record of ten gestures, and the gestures are, most of them, mad and incredible under the eye of reason and sure to be followed by the anti-climaxes by which life levels down heroic gestures; but what gestures! Though they are not life they are magnificent. What Mr. Cabell of Anastasia and Erwyn fits all his people and analyses the magic of the lofty moments which he lets them live in the intervals of disappointment and disillusion: "It was, one estimates, their happiest hour. Frivolous and trivial persons you might have called them and have justified the accusation; but even to the top and the conquette was granted an hour wherein all human happenings seemed to be ordered by supernal wisdom lovingly. Very soon they would forget this hour; meanwhile there was a wonderful sense of dreams come true."

Young Men Take Charge In Italy

BY F. BRITTEN AUSTIN

All the world has heard of the Fascisti—yet few people outside Italy have any precise knowledge of the mighty organisation which created only a little more than two years ago, has reconquered Italy for the Italians, in a new Risorgimento which in a sense is a pendant and completion of the movement of the 'sixties.

There are more than a million declared and organised Fascisti in Italy today—and few of them are over 30. And, moreover, the movement has passed out of its initial "class" phase. Seven hundred thousand of these Fascisti are workmen who have seceded from the virulently anti-patriotic Communist-controlled trade union—for, as the revolutionaries have been unpleasantly reminded, even workmen prefer to be allowed to love, and be proud of, their native country.

Two years ago Lenin announced that the Italian social revolution was an accomplished fact. It looked like it. More than 2,000 municipalties flew the red Soviet flag. To show the Italian national colors almost anywhere in North Italy meant death. The factories were in the occupation of the Communists. The railwaymen revolted and refused to move troops.

The Government acquiesced, afraid in any case to use the Army. Government, in fact, seemed at an end. It would take a book to relate all the anti-patriotic and savage outrages perpetrated by the triumphant Communists in their almost insane hatred of all that stood for Italy as a nation.

Today that state of things has vanished like a bad dream. The young men of Italy resolved to have done with it. They organised themselves. They met violence by violence—they out-terrorised the Terrorists. Communism was extirpated by fire and extinguished in blood. The imbecile general strike of August 1 offered them the occasion for a last overwhelming offensive. They stand undisputioned victors. Communism in Italy is dead.

WHAT FASCISMO WANTS

But what do they want now? It would need an essay on Italian politics to make it fully comprehensible. Briefly, there have hitherto been no great political parties in Italy. The country has been governed by politicians who secure a Parliamentary majority by the temporary and interested combination of several personal groups.

And Italy has been profoundly dissatisfied with the results. It has passed from contempt for its politicians to active dislike.

At the elections in 1919 Fascismo was scarcely born. Now it is master of the country, and yet it is unrepresented in Parliament. The Fascisti said, "Give us the new elections which will return us to power—or, like Caesar and his legionaries, we will cross the Rubicon and march on Rome."

The glory of ancient Rome is dazzled their dream, and their army is modelled on the ancient legions. It is a fighting force of something like 300,000, apart from the 700,000 working enrolled in the Fascisti trade unions. This force is divided into two categories—Principles and Triarii, like the soldiers of old Rome. The Principes, largely young excombatants in the war, form the first line. The triarii are the general reserve.

The unit is the squad, 30 to 50 strong, several squads constituting a cohort and several cohorts a legion. They are uniformed in a black shirt and tasselled cap, and fully armed except perhaps for artillery. There are Fascisti corps of cavalry, aviation, and mechanical transport. A triumvirate of military chiefs, directly under the orders of Mussolini, controls this enthusiastic army, whose rigid discipline is beyond question.

ITS CREATOR

And Mussolini—the creator of this formidable force, the most devised man in Italy today—who and what is he? He is a young man of 37—one of the most remarkable young men in Europe.

To him alone is due the creation, organisation, and growth of this amateur army, in which the youth of Italy flocked, as it once flocked to Caribaldi, to enrol itself. He founded it in 1919 with three squadri—a few score men who took their lives in their hand.

In addition to controlling the wide-flung ramifications of Fascismo, he personally edits his newspaper the Popolo, d'Italia.

But journalism is only a means to an end. He writes in his newspaper, as Napoleon penned his bulletins to his army to communicate his ardent spirit to those who will obey his orders. He is primarily the man of action.

"Violence?" He is sitting at his heaped-up desk, turns with an amused smile of eyes and mouth, a gesture of just tolerant impatience with those who make that objection to his methods. "My dear friend, remember that I knew all the Socialist leaders personally. I knew them to be a lot of bullying cowards. They were ruining Italy but I knew that if I attacked they would run. It was the only way to deal with them. I was right. That episode is finished."

"And the next?"

"The next is that Fascismo"—he refers rarely to himself, always to the entity he called into being—"must take over the government of the country. Fascismo represents the national consciousness of Italy. We are determined that Italy shall be a great nation, respected beyond our frontiers, and proud of itself within. It shall not longer be governed by petty political factions for their sectional interests. Either they will give us that government or—" He made a significant gesture.

That was a month ago. There are those who see in Mussolini the first President of an Italian Republic. He himself proclaims a conditional allegiance to the monarchy. Napoleon before the 18th Brumaire did lipservice to the Directory. But Napoleon is not an exact parallel. The Fascisti see it in Caesar as, by "cohorts" and "legions," the Principes and Triarii mobilise at their leader's orders.

Chinese In Japan

Chinese residents in Japan have organised a mutual aid society. Its headquarters is at Oshima-cho in the suburbs of Tokio. Mr. Wang Hsi-tien, the former secretary of the Chinese Young Men's Association in Japan, is the president of the new organisation, according to the Japan Chronicle.

As the authorities have lately been deporting Chinese laborers on the authority of a ordinance issued in 1899, which provided that the Chinese laborers should not work outside the Concessions without the permission of the Governor, these men have in some cases great difficulties to face. In order to remove them, Mr. Wang Hsi-tien visited the Home Department, the Foreign Department, the Metropolitan police, the Legation, and the Nippon Rodo Sodomeikai and came to an understanding with the authorities. He succeeded to a certain extent in improving the conditions, to the extent that the authorities tacitly suffered the Chinese still remaining to stay in the country. Mr. Wang, who is ever anxious for the welfare of the Chinese residents in Japan, started the new organisation. Interviewed by a Hochi correspondent, Mr. Wang said there were about 1,500 Chinese laborers in Tokio prefecture alone, about 500 of them being on Ishima Island. They were scattered in various places such as Nippori, Senju, Oji, Mikawajima and other places. They were for the most part coolies, and pedlars of paper umbrellas and stonework. There were also a few skilled mechanics at the Honjo Ironworks. The Association was to embrace all of them. The object of the organisation was the improvement of sanitary conditions and morals, mutual aid for unemployed and invalids, supplementary education, and aid in finding employment. It was a sort of Chinese laborers' association. He had visited the central employment office of the Yuaeho-kai (Capital and Labor Harmonisation Association) and negotiated about the employment of the Chinese laborers, but the authorities of the Harmonisation Association said that it could not be done openly, for it conflicted with the Imperial ordinance that was issued in 1899.

1922 Hongkong Shipping Report

The results of last year's working in Hongkong has been disappointing, owing to numerous strikes and to political unrest in China. The Seamen's strike, which started in Hongkong January 13, was not finally settled until March. During the whole of this period many steamers tied up at great loss to owners. Since then, the stevedores, lightermen and other labor guilds have been on strike, resulting in an advance in wages all round, and consequently the cost of operating steamers has gone up. Against this, the price of bunker coal has slightly declined.

The average rates of freight ruling in the various trades are lower than those of the previous year. From Saigon to Hongkong, 25c. per picul; from Bangkok 35c. to 25c.; Hongkong to Hongkong, $3.10; to Canton, $3.30 per ton; Japan to Hongkong, Yen 3.40; to Singapore, Yen 3.50 per ton; Java to Hongkong, 30c. per picul. The price of secondhand tonnage has further declined, and a good many handy-sized steamers of about 20 years old have been sold at about £8 per ton. Steamers of over 4,000 tons and 25 years of age were disposed of as low as £1, 15s. per ton.

Soochow, Dec. 27.—Liang Chichao, the well-known Chinese literary man delivered an inspirational speech before a large audience on the subject represented by two Chinese characters "Kuang Chuen" (Be ardent but cautiously decided) in the assembly hall in the Yates Academy, Soochow.

The speech lasted more than an hour. Mr. Liang quoted many sayings from both foreign and Chinese philosophers on this subject. The lecturer was again invited by the staff of the Soochow University to deliver a speech today in St. John's Hall near the University campus.

No Surprise Over Warren Resignation

Exclusive Dispatch to
THE CHINA PRESS

Washington, D.C. Jan. 2.—The resignation of Mr. Charles B. Warren, Ambassador to Japan was received without surprise in official circles here since the Ambassador expressed the wish to resign several months ago in order to attend to his private affairs. It was stated that the administration regards Ambassador Warren's service in the highest possible light and regrets that the pressure of his private affairs preclude the possibility of his remaining longer at his post at Tokio.

Mr. Warren, who is a personal friend of President Harding and who assisted greatly in his nomination and election, accepted the post only after earnest solicitation by the President.

No suggestion as to whom his successor will be has as yet been made

Spot bar silver in London yesterday was 31⅝d. and forward 30⅝d. The New York price was 64½ cents. The only changes in our official quotations here today from those ruling on December 30th, last day on which business was done, was a rise in the Yen rate to 70½ and a drop in the Franc rate to 945.

Our market here today was inclined to be firm with speculators sellers, and banks also more inclined to sell than buy. In the early part of the morning some business in Sterling was done at 3-0⅝ for January and 3-0¼ for March.

Gold Dollars were done at the same time at 71¼ for January and 71⅛ for March. However, later on in the morning the market became firmer and at the close there were sellers of Sterling at 3-0⅞ for January, 3-0⅝ February and 3-0½ for March delivery. There were sellers of Gold Dollars at 71¾ January, 71¼ February and 71 for forward delivery. There were sellers of Yen at 68½ and buyers at 68¼ for January delivery.

Banks were quoting 3-1⅜ for Sterling bills for delivery this side of China New Year and 3-1¼ for subsequent deliveries. They were quoting 73 for Gold Dollar bills for delivery up to China New Years and 72½ for subsequent deliveries. There were buyers of Franc bills at 990.

India bought silver in London yesterday and the market is reported as steady as is also the New York market.

Large Output Of Cement One Of China's Prospects

A good deal of speculation appears to be entertained at present regarding the future of the cement factories in Shanghai and other parts of China.

The cement industry has been one of the few that survived the period of depression, but fears are now expressed that future prospects will not by any means be good. The industry so far has enjoyed an enviable period of prosperity. Demand for cement has been very keen on account of the large number of new buildings that have been going up, not only in Shanghai but in other parts of the East. There have been also very large constructional works which absorbed cement, and all this has served to keep the factories very busy for some years.

In China today there are in all eight cement factories, one of which, the Shanghai Portland Cement Works, Ltd., which was organised four years ago with a capital of two million dollars, is situated near Shanghai, at Lunghwa. It has a capacity of 1,200 barrels of cement a day, and will not start operations before the Spring of next year.

The prosperous times enjoyed by the cement industry prompted a number of new companies to come into existence, and when they all turn out the commodity there will be less call on other countries to supply China with cement.

In spite of the fact that there are in China eight cement factories with a daily capacity of 11,000 barrels Shanghai's imports of this very necessary building requirement has been going up. Last year the total quantity consigned into Shanghai was twice in value compared with the preceeding year and fifty percent more in quantity. For instance, last year China imported 2,533,918 piculs of cement valued at Tls. 3,656,487, against 1,751,854 piculs of the value of Tls. 1,860,170 in 1920 and 1,515,189 piculs assessed at Tls. 1,612,351.

Hongkong has been sending large quantities of cement to Shanghai, which has been going into the interior. Her exports to China last year came up to the total of 470,176 piculs valued at Tls. 629,967 and this is a marked improvement over the figures of the year previous, which showed that Chinese imported from Hongkong only 252,569 piculs of the value of Tls. 287,960, while in 1919 the imports came up to 150,883 piculs of the value of Tls. 167,647.

Present figures do not point to any apprehension concerning the industry, but the demand, it is believed, will certainly slacken off, and with the large number of cement factories going up everywhere the industry will be affected. It might be mentioned that of the eight cement factories in China three have not yet started working. Their turn-out will probably be 3,600 barrels per day.

A year ago there was a fear that German cement would flood the markets in China and thus serve to take away a great part of the profits of the companies established in China. While importation from Germany has been good, competition has not been keen owing to the fact that a good demand has existed for it, which eliminated all fears. With the lessened inquiry recently, this fear has become recurrent, and the future is consequently doubtful.

Japan has been very successful in her exploitation of the Shanghai market with her cement. She is the largest supplier of China's needs today in the matter of this produce, and there is every likelihood of importations declining when the three new factories begin to work. Compared with 1919, China took less cement from Japan last year, while the takings this year will, it is expected not show any increase over last year.

Shanghai consumes now, on the average, some 25,000 barrels of Japanese cement and the Japanese naturally view with perturbation the increased activity in the establishment of new cement factories in China. Japanese cement is meeting with German competition. An instance of this may be cited in the case of the Singapore market, which usually used to buy good quantities of Portland cement from Japanese mills but are now buying from Germans. A recent contract for 40,000 barrels in Singapore went to a German firm. Japanese cement is also losing ground in European countries and in the Dutch East Indies. The trade that Japanese cement enjoyed two years ago in the Dutch East Indies has entirely disappeared now. The outlook is pretty bad for Japanese cement. The Germans are making great efforts to establish a firm footing in Shanghai in cement, and they might likely be successful in dislodging the Japanese from this market in the product. Last year Japan exported to Shanghai no less than 972,468 piculs of cement, against 684,356 piculs in 1920 and 1,056,255 piculs in 1919.

Yangtsze Steamer Tsesui In Mishap, But Is Repaired

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Ichang, Dec. 26.—The accident to the new winter steamer, Tsesui, on the way up to Chungking was fortunately not very serious and it was possible to execute the necessary repairs where she was. She is now running again.

Considerable interest is being taken in the possibility of winter trade on the Ichang-Chungking run. Another new steamer, the Kiangnan, has now been placed on the run. She was built by the Kiangnan Dock Co., and they are understood to be retaining their interest in her for a time. She left yesterday morning on her maiden voyage to Chungking with a full cargo. She is said to carry 160 tons on a draft of five feet and has a speed of 14½ knots.

There is every prospect of the venture being a success as freight is now very high, and Tls. 28 per bale is being paid for cotton yarn from here to Chungking. The captain of the new steamer is Captain Bell-Syer, who has had considerable experience of the upper reaches of the Yangtsze.

General Sun Chuen-fang has now removed all his command from Ichang and its vicinity, and the last of his staff departed on the Kweilee a week ago. Reports are current here that he may be sent to Fukien to take part in the struggle that is going on there.

Ichang Newspaper Finds Going Tough

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Ichang, Dec. 26.—Ichang is at last trying to run a daily newspaper, called the Ichang Daily Paper. It was to be anticipated that it would not be long before the newspaper and the Generals came to loggerheads on the opium traffic as the event proved. A week or two ago, a reporter received information that a considerable quantity of opium had been carried into a house known as "Heng Ta Yang Hang," duly escorted by soldiers. After further inquiring the conclusion was reached that the opium really belonged to General Chao, and that the "Heng Ta Yang Hang" was being nominally run by one of his detectives and the whole story was printed in an issue of the paper.

Retribution swiftly followed. First there came the detective to make a row about the matter, and later the editor was invited by General Chao to his Yamen. There he was confronted with the news in the paper, and slapped by the General for daring to print such a story. So the paper was suspended for a bit, but is now being issued again.

Another Supreme Court Shift

The "Dark Horse" who walked into the United States Supreme Court recently and donned the robes of an Associate Justice is a practising lawyer of St. Paul, fifty-six years old, and a Democrat. "And," remarks the Albany Knickerbocker Press, "Mr. Pierce Butler, successor to Associate Justice William R. Day, Republican, will as a Democrat aid in balancing the political complexion of the Court." There are now six Republican and three Democratic Justices, and of these Mr. Butler is the youngest, according to the New York Sun, five of the present members being in their sixties, one in his seventies, and one in his eighties. Justice Day, say Washington despatches, resigned in order to devote his undivided attention to his duties as umpire on the American-German Claims Commission.

Immediately after Justice Day's resignation, Washington correspondents began to speculate on his successor. Ex-Ambassador Davis, and Senators Shields of Tennessee, Walsh of Montana, Pomerene of Ohio, and Underwood of Alabama were named as possible selections. But Chief Justice Taft and Senator Kellogg of Minnesota are said by the New York World to have urged the selection of Mr. Butler, a corporation lawyer. The fact that he had acted as legal adviser for certain railroads served as an excuse for the Socialist majority of the Milwaukee City Council to adopt a resolution declaring that "it is a crime to appoint Mr. Butler." The La Follette progressive group in the Senate also joined with representatives of organised labor in criticising the appointment, yet in the opinion of the Philadelphia Public Ledger and other representative dailies "the appointment would seem to have been a judicious one," to quote The Ledger.

"Although there is no politics about the Supreme Court, it pleases the public sense of fair play to see a Republican President put a Democrat on the Bench," observes the New York Times. That Mr. Butler was appointed solely on his merit is generally agreed, although the Brooklyn Eagle fears he is "too conservative." "Mr. Butler's fame has not spread beyond relatively narrow bounds, yet this is not to his discredit," observes the New York World, while a Washington dispatch to the New York Evening Post tells us that—

"Mr. Butler was retained a number of years ago by an important group of railroads to look after their interests in connection with the physical valuation legislation. About two years ago he was retained by the Government of Canada as its counsel in the proceedings to determine the price which the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad Company should be paid for its properties when they were taken over by the Government. Mr. Butler contended that the Canadian Government ought not to pay anything in addition to the upset price, and he won his case.

"In 1910 Mr. Butler was appointed special counsel for the Government by the then Attorney-General, George W. Wickersham, in the prosecution of the Chicago meat-packers, under indictment for violation of the Sherman Act.

"In recognition of his ability in cases involving the valuation of public utilities, Mr. Butler has recently been retained by the city of Toronto to handle its case in fixing the valuation at which its traction system is to be bought by the city."

China's New Premier

PEKING Cabinets latterly have been makeshift contrivances. Few last more than six months, while the last two under Mr. Wang Tah-hsien and Dr. C. T. Wang lived but ten days each. Most of them come into existence in order to put through some scheme whereby the positions of certain political cliques may be strengthened, but invariably they fail. Since 1918, none of them has had genuine legal status on account of the dissolution of Parliament.

The present Cabinet under Chang Shou-tseng is the first one to be confirmed by the National Legislature. It is expected to last longer and hence to function more effectively for the clique that was instrumental in putting it in power. A review of Gen. Chang's work and discussion of his plans therefore will not be out of place at this juncture.

Chang was one of the original members of the old Peiyang clique, an organisation that anti-dates the history of party politics in China. Though comparatively a young man, he had achieved distinction in the early days of the party. He came into fame with the 19 reformations promulgated by the Imperial Ta Ching Household, because it was understood that he was the author of the edict. He was then serving as Commander-in-Chief of the First Division of the Reorganised National Army of the Manchu Regime. It was natural for Chang to be identified with the Republican Cause when revolution broken out in 1911. When Yuan Shih-kai assumed the presidency early in 1912, Chang was made his confidential councillor. Upon the first anniversary of the founding of the Republic, Chang was sent to Suiyuan as its Tartar-General. In 1915, he became Deputy Military Commissioner of Kiachta.

The fall of Yuan's monarchical scheme saw Chang's influence at its zenith. He continued to hold important offices when the Chihli faction came into power. He travelled extensively, studying the political situation in various provinces. After the defeat of the Anfuites in 1920, General Chang rose to popular favor by advocating the holding of a convention for the solution of national affairs in Lo-shan, Kiangsi, but on account of the opposition of Chang Tso-lin and the ignorance of other military factions, it was never held. Up to the time of the clash between Chang Tso-lin and Wu Pei-fu last Spring, Chang remained as the personal representative of General Wu in the latter's political negotiations with the various leaders. He is related to General Wu by marriage, his daughter being betrothed to the only son of the Chihli warrior.

Since the victory of General Wu, however, General Chang has been more closely connected with General Tsao Kun, than Wu himself. The latter, while not openly opposed to his appointment as premier, objects to the purpose of his appointment which is the election of Tsao as the next president. The Chihli party is split into three factions on this question, which is naively termed "the Supreme Question." Tsao Kun has consented to serve as the Chief Executive if he is elected by Parliament. He is the fence-rider; he does not care to fight for that office. This represents the first faction, to which belong the immediate subordinates of Tsao at Paotingfu. The second clique has its headquarters in Tientsin, led by Tsao's brother, Tsao Jui, former Civil Governor of Chihli and Pien Shu-tsing, the Tientsin financier politician, who favor the immediate election of Tsao as the National Chief. The third clique is led by General Wu Pei-fu and supported by President Li Yuan-hung and members of the Presidential menage who are, we understand, vigorously opposed to Tsao's election.

Of course, the important factor in the election is Parliament, which is never unanimous on any question. On "the Supreme Question," Parliament is known to be split, but the overwhelming majority of votes cast by both houses in the recent confirmation of Chang as Premier is some indication that a large number of the M.P.'s have already been approached by the Tientsin clique and are favorably inclined towards Chang's platform.

And the election is but one of the planks of the platform. Premier Chang has made several promises to the nation, which by this time probably does not care who gets into the Presidential chair so long there can be peace and financial solvency. Chief among the promises are the enactment of the National Constitution by Parliament, the extension of clemency to all political refugees, in order to secure alliances with Kuomingtang, Anfu and Mukden militarists and the calling of a military conference for the termination of hostilities to be followed by an internal peace parley to be held on neutral soil.

These schemes, if properly carried out and completed, will no doubt win for the new premier lasting fame and for Tsao Kun his presidential chair. But the obstacles are yet many and the great danger is the impatience of the Tientsin clique to put Tsao Kun in the Hsin Hua Palace before the other aspirations are achieved. This haste may prove to be suicidal to the whole scheme.

Under Suspicion

BY S. E. KISER

Taught by necessity, his wife succeeds
In making an appearance that is fine;
They have a hundred hard and pressing needs,
But she reveals them not by word or sign.
Her dresses are re-fashioned and re-made,
She wears them well, and has an eye for style;
He frets because he isn't better paid,
But she accepts conditions with a smile.

He was not born to govern other men,
His talent is the small and common kind;
The world will be but little poorer when
The troubles that he has are left behind;
By deftness with the needle and the shears
She sends her children schoolward, looking trim;
Her youthfulness defies the passing years,
She keeps her figure supple still and slim.

Hope has enhanced the beauty of her face,
Her softly-spoken words are full of cheer;
She does not find the world a dismal place,
But keeps her heart serene, her vision clear;
She has not let her aspirations die,
Her day-dreams still are brightened with romance,
And others do not fail to wrong her by
The look of envy and the knowing glance.

By clever little touches here and there
She adds superbness to her home-made things,
And other women shake their heads and stare,
While slander flies as if equipped with wings.
"Things ain't as they should be," says Mrs. J.
In whispered confidence to Mrs. S.,
"There's something else besides her husband's pay;
It's awful what some folks'll do for dress!"

We're the only gink in the village who is going to have a clean sheet in 1923 because our first and only resolution was not to make any resolutions.

-:- New Faces In The Senate -:-

Many Radicals Of Varied Hue Among The New Members Of The American Upper House—Harding's "Golf Cabinet" Retires

(New York Times)

The next United States Senate will include some of the most diverse personalities ever gathered together in that body, and their political convictions will be as far apart as the men themselves. They range all the way from outspoken radicals to stone-wall standpatters, with a large influx of liberals in between. Washington observes say that party lines are going to be broken many times, that personal convictions will play a larger part in Senate deliberations than ever before. Looking at the roll call, it is easy to believe this prediction.

Among those who will be missing when Vice-President Coolidge calls the Senate to order will be some of the best-known men in American public life, several of whom retired voluntarily, but many more of whom went down in the landside recently. Three of those whose names will not be on the Senate roll are intimate friends of the President, the men who made up with him his famous "foursome," his most frequent guests on the week-end voyages of the Mayflower, and upon whose advice he had leaned heavily since he assumed the Executive office. They are Kellogg of Minnesota, vanquished by Dr. Henrik Shipstead, a Farmer-Labor radical; Harry S. New of Indiana, who lost in the primary a few months ago, and Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, signally defeated by Edward I. Edwards, New Jersey's "wet" Governor.

Other well-known Republican members of the present Senate who will retire to private life next March include McCumber of North Dakota, Chairman of the Finance Committee, who was a primary victim of the Non-Partisan League; Howard Sutherland of West Virginia, Gen. T. Coleman du Pont of Delaware, William M. Calder of New York, also a member of the Finance Committee; Joseph Irwin France of Maryland, whose hobby was recognition by this Government of the Russian Soviet regime, and the veteran Charles E. Townsend of Michigan. His defense of Newberry and advocacy of the new tariff sent him down to defeat in Michigan, the first Senator of his party to be overwhelmed by the Democrats of Michigan in a half century. Senator Page of Vermont, the Senate's oldest member in point of age, returned to private life voluntarily.

JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS OUT

Of the Democrats who will be missing the best known was John Sharp Williams of Mississippi. Mr. Williams quit public life of his own accord, but such was not the case with Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, who was War Chairman of the Committee on Finance and leader of the losing fight for ratification of the Versailles Treaty. Atlee Pomerene of Ohio, and a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, who directed the fight to unseat Newberry, and had been mentioned as a possible Democratic nominee for President in 1924, was another loser.

Smith W. Brookhart, who goes to the Senate from Iowa as the Republican successor of William S. Kenyon, father of the "farm bloc," and of Charles A. Rawson, who served by appointment the few weeks between the Kenyon resignation and the general election, will line up with the La Follette-Borah-Norris group.

Brookhart, a former National Guard Colonel, gained considerable fame as a marksman and instructor of sharpshooters. He will be one of the picturesque figures in the next Congress. He is bushy-haired, of bold features and clean shaven, an orator of considerable ability, a good mixer and first, last and all the time a champion—he says so himself—of the "common folks."

The victory of Colonel Brookhart in the Republican primary last Summer was a bitter loss for the Harding Administration. His was a clean-cut triumph in a field of six. He was opposed by all the Old Guard leaders, but supported by Borah, La Follette, Norris, Kenyon and others of that school, who urged the farmers of the "long-corn" State to rally, regardless of party affiliations, to the Brookhart standard. When the returns from the cornfields came in it was apparent that they had done so.

Colonel Brookhart is in his early fifties, and the father of six children. It has been said that in the course of his campaign he did not once mention the name of President Harding.

LIBERAL FROM NEBRASKA

Ralph Beecher Howell, the next Republican Senator from Nebraska, who will take the place of Gilbert M. Hitchcock, was chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs and leader of the losing fight for ratification of the Treaty of Versailles, is well known in the Middle West, for his management of the municipally owned water, gas and ice plants of the City of Omaha. In 1920 he was the manager of General Leonard Wood's Presidential campaign in Nebraska. As a Senator he will be of the progressive group, an adherent of the "farm bloc," and it is believed that he generally will be found lined up with Borah and Norris in other matters of national legislation.

Mr. Howell is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy and will be one of the two former naval officers in the next Congress. The other will be Senator Weller of Maryland. Mr. Howell's nomination for the Senate last Summer was one of the many blows delivered to the Lodge-Watson machine, and although he has received the open support of the Administration there were many Republicans in Nebraska who would be much more welcome in Washington.

Mr. Howell's victory arose in large part from the support of the Non-Partisan League and the German element in the Nebraska electorate, both of which openly fought the candidacy of Senator Hitchcock. The prohibitionists also played a big part in the victory. Mr. Howell is "bone dry." He declares that prohibition is responsible for whatever prosperity the country is now enjoying. He says that eventually prohibition will pay the cost of the war.

The new Senator is against the ship subsidy, for a soldier bonus and wants a "rational tariff." To date he has not made himself clear as to what that constitutes. So far as the campaign records show, he has not said that the Fordney-McCumber law was an "irrational" tariff.

Mr. Howell is of distinguished appearance. His is the bearing of the Annapolis-trained athlete. He was born in Michigan, and will be 50 years old in January.

FIRST FARMER-LABORITE

Dr. Henrik Shipstead, a St. Paul dentist, was the first candidate of the Farmer-Labor Party ever elected to the upper House of Congress. Within two years he has forged to the front as one of the leaders of the radical political group which has shown such surprising strength in the Middle West.

Shipstead will line up in the Senate with La Follette and Brookhart. He has so stated on every platform in Minnesota. The planks on which he rode to victory were repeal of the Esch-Cummins act, passage of what he has called a "real bonus" law, reorganisation of the Federal Reserve System in "the interest of the common people," and the unseating of Senator Newberry. Not until the last ten days of the campaign did the rival political camps in Minnesota take Shipstead's candidacy seriously. Then reports of his strength from the labor center and the Non-Partisan League strongholds began pouring into the Kellogg headquarters in St. Paul and Charles B. Adams, Chairman of the committee, issued a last minute appeal to the Democrats that they desert their own candidate, Mrs. Anna D. Olesen, and help re-elect the President's friend, Mr. Kellogg. Democrats refused to enter the enemy fold.

New Faces In The Senate

Dr. Shipstead is a clean-cut appearing man, still in his early forties. He was born in Minnesota of Norwegian parents and educated at Northwestern University, Illinois.

Woodbridge N. Ferris, the first Democrat to represent Michigan in the Senate since before the Civil War, has been referred to as the "best known teacher" in Michigan. He is the founder and head of the Ferris Institute at Big Rapids, Mich., a school with an alumni roll which rivals in number that of the great university at Ann Arbor. During the campaign it was remarked that if everybody who had studied under Mr. Ferris voted for him his election would be a foregone conclusion. Recently a prominent citizen of Detroit, discussing the Ferris-Townsend campaign with the writer, said he would vote to send Mr. Townsend back to Washington.

"But my vote," he added, "will be more than canceled by my two daughters. They both went to Ferris Institute and they are going to vote for him."

A DOCTOR IN THE SENATE

Dr. Royal S. Copeland, the first New York physician to win a seat in the Senate, owes his success principally to his activities as Health Commissioner of New York. It is safe to say that almost up to the very moment he was nominated last Summer the thought of serving the Empire State in the upper house of Congress never had entered his mind. It was the great surprise of his career when the news came to him that he had been selected as the Senatorial candidate. The next surprise probably was the returns which showed that he had defeated Senator Calder, veteran Republican politician, by a landslide vote of more than 200,000. Dr. Copeland will be one of two physicians in the Senate. The other is Senater Ball of Delaware. Senator France of Maryland also is a physician, but his name will not be on the roll-call.

Dr. Copeland is a native of Michigan and once upon a time, long before he decided to come to New York, was Mayor of the university city of Ann Arbor. He is a graduate of the University of Michigan, and in preparing himself for a medical career took postgraduate courses in France, Germany, Belgium and Switzerland. Twenty-two years ago he came to New York to accept the directorship of Flower Hospital, and he was still the head of that institution when offered the post of Health Commissioner by Mayor Hylan. In his campaign the doctor surprised his friends by the vigor of the fight he put up. He proved that he knew a lot about other things than medicine, among them the tariff, the high cost of livng and subjects which might be properly classed under the head of "humanities."

Thomas F. Bayard of Delaware, whose father, the fifth of the Bayard Senators, was Grover Cleveland's intimate friend and Secretary of State in Cleveland's first Administration, will be the sixth of the Delaware Bayards to represent the smallest of the States in the Senate. The first of this famous Delaware family to sit in the Senate was James Asheton Bayard, who served from 1805 to 1813, and was Thomas Jefferson's main support in his campaign against Burr.

Mr. Bayard ran on a platform that pledged him "to vote for economy in national government, denounced the existing tariff law, did not declare for prohibition but suggested enforcement of that act, and made a strong declaration in favor of State rights.

This is Mr. Bayard's first appearance in the arena of nationwide politics. He defeated General T. Coleman du Pont, who, in addition to his other great business interests, perhaps is best known as the head of a corporation that owns a great chain of hotels in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

REAT NON-PARTISAN LEAGUE

J. F. T. O'Connor, the "Jeffy" of the Independent Voters' Association of North Dakota, which has brought about the downfall of the Townley-Frazier Non-Partisan League organisation in that State, will be the second Democratic Senator from North Dakota since it was admitted to statehood. He is a young lawyer of Grand Forks and considered one of the best speakers in the Middle West.

Mr. O'Connor is a native of North Dakota and a graduate of the State-University. Two years ago he came into prominence as the Democratic nominee for Governor against Lynn J. Frazier, who, in that election, as in this one, represented the Non-Partisan League and all the "isms" of that organisation, including State ownership of flour mills, grain elevators, packing houses and other businesses. It has been charged that in many ways the League movement was not unlike the Lenin-Trotsky movement in Russia. As a candidate for Governor, Mr. O'Connor had more than 100,000 votes ahead of his ticket and came within a few thousand of equalling the record breaking total cast for President Harding. Mr. Frazier defeated him by less than 5,000 votes.

In the primary this year Mr. Frazier won the Republican nomination over Senator Porter J. McCumber, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance, and as a result of that victory the Non-Partisan League captured the Republican Party State organisation rom top to bottom. Every member of the State Committee was of the League or in sympathy with it.

Burton Kendall Wheeler, who will succeed Senator Henry Lee Myers as Senator from Montana, is a native of Massachusetts. He will be one of the youngest men in the Senate, 41 next February. Mr. Wheeler is numbered among the ablest speakers in the Northwest, and his friends maintain that it was his oratory more than anything else which made possible his victory over Carl W. Riddick, his Republican opponent.

NON-PARTISAN LEAGUE

In 1920 Mr. Wheeler was the Democratic nominee for Governor of Montana against Joseph M. Dixon, who was Colonel Roosevelt's chief lieutenant in the mountain country, and who was the National Bull Moose Chairman in 1912. In that campaign Mr. Wheeler was endorsed by the Non-Partisan League, which led to a revolt in the Democratic Party. Among the prominent Democrats who campaigned against him that year was Senator Myers, whom he will now succeed in the Senate. This year the Non-Partisan endorsement was again brought to the front by the Republicans, but the Democrats were able to prove that Mr. Riddick had been a member of the Townley organisation, and so the issue fell of its own weight.

Mr. Wheeler is a graduate of the University of Michigan. He was United States Attorney for Montana during the Wilson Administration and always has been a supporter of the Wilson policies. In his campaign he emphasised his opposition to the tariff, and on every stump denounced the Republican policy of isolation in foreign affairs, lining up squarely as a follower of Mr. Wilson. This was one Democratic victory that Mr. Wilson might justly claim as an endorsement of his course as President. Mr. Wheeler's home is in Butte. He is a Mason, and also a prominent member of the Methodist Church.

Simeon D. Fess, who has defeated Atlee Pomerene of Ohio for the United States Senatorship, was President of Antioch College before he stopped teaching to enter politics. He is tall and slim, and in many ways reminds one of Senator Shortridge of California, once referred to by Senator "Jim" Reed of Missouri as the "wisest looking man" who ever came to the Senate.

Mr. Fess, known in the House as "Professor," is an author of note, among his books being an "Outline of American History" and a textbook on the political experts of his party, and physiology. He is considered one of the political experts of his party, and in 1920 was the Chairman of the Republican National Congressional Committee. He is a stand-patter, and can be counted on to stand by the Administration on all occasions. Only once has he deserted the President, on the bonus, when he voted to override Mr. Harding's veto.

Mr. Fess was born in Ohio, 61 years ago. His home is in the little town of Yellow Springs.

THE KU KLUX IN TEXAS

Earle B. Mayfield, who succeeds Charles A. Culberson as United States Senator from Texas, will go to Washington, rightly or wrongfully branded with the stigma of the Ku Klux Klan. In his campaign for the nomination when he defeated Senator Culberson and seven other contestants he had the support of the "invisible horde," and it has been said that without this support he would have been among the last in the race. It never has been denied that he was the Ku Klux candidate, and rumors are rife in Washington that when he presents himself before the Senate his right to the seat may be challenged.

Mayfield was State Commissioner of Railroads when he announced himself as a candidate. The campaign for the nomination was hardly on before the Ku Klux and its support of Mayfield was made the dominent issue. It was a campaign of personalities to a large extent, and with a big field to divide the anti-Ku Klux vote Mayfield won out. In the first primary he was an easy first, and in the second he decisively defeated ex-Governor James E. Ferguson.

Mayfield favors the repeal of the Esch-Cummins act, is for the bonus and will be one of the "farm bloc." If his election is challenged it with mean a fight in the Senate that will parallel in national interest the battle to unseat Newberry.

EDWARDS BEST KNOWN WET

Governor Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey, who overwhelmed the President's close friend and golf partner, Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, perhaps is the most famouse "wet" statesman in America. His alleged statement that he was as "wet as the Atlantic Ocean," and his consistent advocacy of a modification of the prohibition law, has given him nationwide stature and made him one of the men against whom the Anti-Saloon League has waged inrelenting warfare. Despite his well-known views on prohibition, the new Senator is a teetotaler. He is "wet" on principle.

Mr. Edwards was born in Jersey City fifty-nine years ago. He is one of the leading bankers of his State and a Director of many corporations. Prior to his election to the Governorship he had been the State Controller and President of the State Senate, and for years he has been prominent in the councils of the Protestant Episcopal Church of his State.

SAMUEL M. RALSTON

Samuel Moffett Ralston, who succeeds Harry S. New, the intimate friend of President Harding, as Senator from Indiana, is an ex-Governor of the Hoosier State, and has been for more than forty years a leader of the Indiana Democracy. His defeat of Albert J. Beveridge, twice elected to the Senate from Indiana, and who was supposed to have behind him the almost solid progressive Republican vote of Indiana, was one of the upsets of the election.

Mr. Ralston is a typical Democrat of the old school. In the campaign he made the tariff the paramount issue, and hammered away at it day and night. The result proved that in Indiana the new Fordney-McCumber law was just about as unpopular as in the other great farming States of the Middle West. Few observers thought that he would be able to overcome the handicap, Beveridge's "Bull Moose" fame and his "silver-tongued oratory." But he did it, and the reason was that Beveridge, in the opinion of many of his friends, ruined his chances by playing "standpat" after defeating Senator New for the nomination on a platform that was distinctly of the progressive variety.

The successor of Caroll S. Page of Vermont in the Senate is to be Frank Lester Greene of St. Albans, now a member of the House of Representatives. Thirty years ago Mr. Greene was a reporter on a country newspaper in Vermont, and before that he had been a messenger boy and for a time a more or less expert stenographer. He is one of the self-made men who has earned a name for himself in Washington. There are few members of the lower House more influential or who have more friends than the next junior Senator from the Green Mountain State.

GUARDSMAN FROM VERMONT

Mr. Greene was born in St. Albans 52 years ago. Ten years ago he was elected to the House and has been re-elected four times. For years he has been a leading figure in the Vermont National Guard and has served as Adjutant General of the State. He raised one of the first companies that went to the front from Vermont in the Spanish-American War. He is an ex-President of the Vermont Sons of the American Revolution. By profession he is a newspaper man.

William Cabell Bruce, who succeeds Joseph Irwin France as Senator from Maryland and whose success again gives the Democrats of Maryland representation in the upper house of Congress, is one of the best-known lawyers in that State. He is a member of a famous Virginia family and was born in Charlotte County, that State, sixty-two years ago. He is a graduate of the University of Virginia of the class of 1880, and for a quarter of a century has been a leader of the Baltimore bar.

Mr. Bruce is all old-line Democrat and properly may be described as of the Underwood school. For years he has been a leader in good government and reform movements in Maryland and is an authority on the Constitution and American history. He has written a life of Benjamin Franklin and a Virginia historical sketch called "Below the James," as well as other works of a historical nature.

Matthew Mansfield Neely of Fairmont, W. Va., who succeeds Howard Sutherland as Senator from West Virgina, is a former member of the House of Representatives. He is a leading lawyer of his State, as well as prominent business man interested in many enterprises. He is 48 years old, a native of West Virginia, a graduate of West Virginia University and a Phi Beta Kappa man.

Mr. Neely's election was another of the big surprises. Senator Sutherland, whom he defeated, has been considered in Washington by his colleagues on both sides of the Chamber, is one of the ablest men who has ever represented West Virginia in the Senate. Mr. Sutherland was one of the famous nine who voted to unseat Newberry.

SUCCESSOR TO WILLIAMS

Hubert Durrett Stephens, who was born and bred and still live in Union County, Mississippi, goes to Washington as the successor of John Sharp Williams, admitted by men of all parties to be one of the ablest debaters and keenest-witted men who has ever served the South in Congress. As Senator Byron Patton Harrison, better known as "Pat" Harrison, has expressed it, Stephens will be called upon to fill the "highest pair of shoes that ever walked out of Mississippi."

In the campaign that won for Mr. Stephens the mantle of Mr. Williams the issue was Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Stephens stood for the policies of the ex-President. Opposing him was James K. Vardama, who still commands great strength. In the end, but not until a second primary was held, Stephens won the nomination.

Walter F. George, now an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia, will succeed the late Senator Thomas E. Watson as Senator from that State.

Senator George is a distinguished member of the Georgia bar, a graduate of Mercer University, and an opponent of the League of Nations. The late Senator Watson, known as the "Stormy Petrel of Georgia politics," was one of the ex-President's most bitter and unrelenting critics and The Columbia (Ga.) Sentinel, Mr. Watson's former personal organ supported the new Senator in his race against Governor Hardwick for the nomination. Senator George also favored the radical amendment of the Esch-Cummins act, and is said to sympathise generally with the radical views characteristic of Mr. Watson.

In his campaign for the nomination, Senator George certified that he did not spend a penny. He is said to be an able speaker, and is still in the early forties. Despite his adherence to the Watson doctrines, his friends maintain that he will be much more conservative than his predecessor.

Mrs. Thompson Seton Speaks At Woman's Club

Vivid pictures of the modern women of Egypt who are breaking away from the customs of the ages to take a leading part in the nation's political life were painted by Mrs. Grace Thompson Seton at the meeting of the American Woman's Club held Monday at the Carlton Cafe.

According to Mrs. Seton, who arrived in Shanghai from Egypt recently, the women have stepped out of their harems and "dangling their veils beside them, are working day and night to bring independence to their country—a true independence, both political and social as they see it."

The women who are taking part in the new political movement are from all classes of society and the leaders are strikingly beautiful. With their large expressive dark eyes, their clear olive skin, grace of manner, unusual culture, ability to speak many languages and thorough understanding of the political situation, the women of Egypt are becoming an important factor in the fight the Egyptians are making for independence.

But with all their efforts in the field of politics, the women are not banishing their feminine charms or striving to copy the men. They are not even discarding their veils, for according to Mrs. Seton, "they are true daughters of Eve and realise that they are more mysterious and alluring with the veil then without."

"Let us consider the political group of women," said Mrs. Seton. "The Ladies Wafd (delegation, for the Independence of Egypt" is composed of women drawn from the ever-widening circle of the New Woman who is demanding her 'place in the sun' all over this whirling world of ours.

MODERN METHODS

"Inspired by a deep patriotism which suppression has brought to the point of fanaticism, women are working for the release of their leader, Saad Zaghlul Pasha and for the men who have been exiled with him and also for those who are removed by prison walls from carrying on their efforts to break down the power of the English and of the Zarwat ministry.

"They claim that the present government, under King Fuad I and his cabinet, does not represent the Egyptian people: that the Premier, Zarwat Pashais not even an Egyptian but a Tunisian.

"We all know that the female of the species is more deadly than the male' and the fire of spiritual rebellion is burning in the heart of every woman in the Zaghlulist party. They have adopted the slogan 'We shall go on until the end.'

"The methods of the Ladies Wafd are essentially modern. They have studied the doings of the suffragists of England and America and instead of taking fifty years or so to develop their political life—they have entered the political arena over night as it were.

"They remind me of a small town that jumped from candle light to electricity without going through the various phases of lighting that have come between in the majority of towns.

"The women organised committees in the big cities and in the provinces and recently held a meeting in Cairo which was attended by more than 2,000 women who made political speeches and vowed continual effort to boycott the English and English goods. These women also introduced the street manifestations and parades of women."

SPEAKS OF QUEEN

Mrs. Seton spoke of a number of women and the work they are doing and in a few words drew a fascinating picture of the Queen of Egypt. Mrs. Seton was fortunate in securing an interiew with the Queen during her stay in Egypt and she described her as a stately beauty in a gilded cage who is hoping that a bar in the cage will weaken and that she may be able to go forth and see something of the world. She is especially anxious to see the Rocky Mountains—"I must see the wonderful Rocky Mountains," she said to Mrs. Seton, "and I tell His Excellency often that he must take me on his next trip abroad for I have never traveled. I have a little daughter and I hope that by the time she is grown the new movement for the freedom of the women of Egypt will have reached such a stage that my little girl will be able to go into the world as do the women of America.

Mrs. Seton, who is the wife of Ernest Thompson Steon, is leaving for Hangchow today for a short visit.

W.O. Lemp, St. Louis Brewer, Kills Self

Exclusive Dispatch to
THE CHINA PRESS

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 3.—William O. Lemp, fifty four years of age and president of the Lemp Brewing Company, committed suicide early this morning by shooting himself through the head. His body with the revolver beside it was found in his office early this morning.

Despondency over the collapse of his brewing business, following the advent of Prohibition, is given as the cause.

The suicide complex appears to have been exceptionally strong in the Lemp family, since Mr. Lemp's father committed suicide in 1904 and his sister killed herself in 1920.

(China Press Service)

Manila, Dec. 26.—The total sugar output from the six centrals of the Philippine Sugar Centrals Agency this season will be between 85,000 and 90,000 tons, valued at about P20,000,000 according to D. M. Semple, general manager of the agency.

From Negros alone the agency has exported to the United States 8,200 tons of sugar.

Hongkong Police Take Rifles From The "Jefferson"

(China Press Service)

Hongkong, Dec. 28.—With the arrival of the s.s. President Jefferson in port yesterday, a party of police, led by Sergeant Fallon and Sergeant Kellett, conducted a search for arms on board the vessel. So sure were the Police that the arms were aboard that they went to the trouble of moving many tons of coal in the bunkers.

Underneath one of the bunkers were discovered 51 Winchester rifles and 9,000 rounds of ammunition. The arms and ammunition were removed to the Central Station. No arrests have been made.

Commerce Bureau Sees Good Prospects

Exclusive dispatch to
THE CHINA PRESS

Washington, D.C. Jan. 2.—The Department of Commerce issued a statement today announcing an optimistic trend in the country's return to prosperity. The business outlook for 1923 is much better than at the beginning of the year. Building has increased fifty per cent over the year previous.

The exceptional increase in production of necessities is remarkable in view of the many strikes and other setbacks affecting American trade. Unemployment has decreased and the farmers are receiving higher prices for their produce. The cost of living has decreased 10 percent while savings banks deposits, and postal receipts have increased as has advertising both in newspapers and magazines.

Glands In Demand, Monkey Prices Up

(China Press Service)

Paris, Jan. 1.—The price of chimpanzees is rising rapidly in consequence of the grafting operations by Dr. Voronoff.

A traveller recently returned from the Belgian Congo states that chimpanzees, which formerly cost $35 to $45 each, are greatly sought after now at prices varying from $350 to $450. Chimpanzee-raising is becoming a popular and profitable business in the Congo.

OPEN NEW QUARTERS

A pleasant ceremony took place on Monday afternoon, when the new premises of the Shanghai Lodge of the Theosophical Society, at 29 Avenue Edouard VII were consecrated. Professor H. P. Shastri presided, and in a short address set forth the aims of the Society, which, he said, should above all be free dogma and intolerance. Miss Dorothy Arnold spoke of the opportunities which the Society offered for devoted labor and service. A series of Saturday lectures, open to the public, has been arranged, and particulars of these will be announced at a later date.
